

High in the mountains, amongst the tall grass, the ancient shards of shale, the mud and the vines, a single line of water no thicker than your pinky bleeds out of the ground and trails down, into creeks, streams and eventually, the snaking form of the river, winding its way to the vast endless ocean.

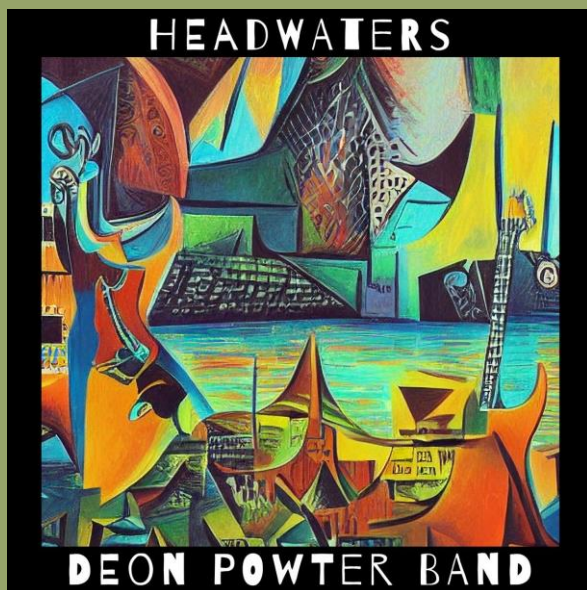

These humble beginnings are the headwaters, not unlike the headwaters of our minds,, trickling forth from the hardest to access places, from experiences and memories, emotions flow from the deepest lows and the highest highs, pouring into an ocean of creativity where anything is possible.

The 10 tracks that make up Headwaters, the debut album from Deon Powter Band, are an amalgamation of memories, fantasies and emotions. They are bold, creative, humble , honest, and kind.

Unrestrained by genre and anchored by love; for the planet, ourselves and each other, Headwaters beckons you forward on a journey through fire, pandemic and flood.

Headwaters is an assured, confident, and triumphant debut with all the polish of a major label album and guaranteed to be one of the best independent releases of the year.

Be swept along as the album explores what it means to be human, with tales of jealousy, enlightenment, courage, grief that breeds indifference, the wild abandon of youth and above all else the hope and strength of will that comes from feeling connected.

Be swept along as the album explores what it means to be human, with tales of jealousy, enlightenment, courage, grief that breeds indifference, the wild abandon of youth and above all else the hope and strength of will that comes from feeling connected.

